February Program to be announced

What have you made recently? Bring your show and tell items to the February meeting

Highlights of January Meeting, chaired by Jim Stevens

Ron Hasse brought a Shaker table, with the idea to consider this for a Guild collaborative project.

Mike Okner mentioned the various skill building classes offered at the Woodcraft Store, taught by experienced woodworkers and aimed at a spectrum of skill levels, from rank beginner to master classes. See website below.

Jim Kirkbride suggested a practical schoolmaster's desk as a project, involving joinery and finishing skills, creating a salable item.

Matt Given suggested a contest to make a particular piece, eg box and judge the products submitted on quality.

Wayne Scholz mentioned a 2 by 4 contest: Use a 2 by 4, 8 ft long and design an item.

Hans Francke described a problem of thickening of Watco Danish oil, to be resolved by the producer.

Finishing. A thoughtful process. Keep the required finish in mind when creating a project.

Our library has the books, please check the Guild website.

Carving: From goofy spooks to detailed ducks to architectural elements to pictorial designs.

Scrollsaw:

Some people specialize in this type of woodworking, patience and precision are significant elements

Do you have suggestions for topics?

Are you willing to do a demo about things you like to make, let us know!

Show and Tell!

Are we missing a barrel? Jeremy showing off his modified gunstock

Jim Kirkbride, practical as ever, modified a low cost Harbor Freight plane to function as a scrub plane, results on the right.
